"With the Flexiroam App now being approved by both Apple and Android, we are extremely excited to showcase our new product to the world. The app is perfect for all segments of travellers. It is a very secure app and is designed to meet all forms of user's communication needs: voice calls, video calls, instant messaging and other collaborative tools. This makes it one of the most comprehensive communication apps in the market. The app perfectly complements our existing SIM Card products by providing users a wider range of options to gain access to our services. We believe the app will allow us to scale our business at a faster pace globally." says Jef Ong, CEO of Flexiroam.

According to the latest Mobility Report from Ericsson, there are 2.6 billion smartphone subscriptions globally todayⁱ. By 2020, it is expected that there will be 6.1 billion smartphone users, led by huge growth in less mature markets, accounting for 70 per cent of the world's population. Asia Pacific and India are expecting to see the most significant growth.

In addition, according to TripAdvisor's latest TripBarometer study, travellers in APAC are planning to do more travelling abroad, with the average number of international leisure trips set to increase by 15 per cent in 2015ⁱⁱ.

The growth of the smartphone market, particularly in APAC and India, in addition to the growth in budget travel in the region, presents a significant opportunity to Flexiroam. The Flexiroam app's ability to provide high quality voice in low bandwidth environments at a low cost, makes the Flexiroam App an ideal companion for both holidaymakers and business users.

"Following our IPO, we have invested significantly in both geographic and product expansion to capitalise on the growing market in APAC for international roaming services. The Flexiroam App will enable us to benefit from the increase in budget travellers and those previously affected by 'Bill Shock', to become the key provider of roaming services in the APAC region. This launch enhances our already comprehensive offering to global travellers but it is only the tip of the iceberg as we continue to develop exciting new products to cater to the entire communication needs for travellers" says Jef Ong.
